FOREWORD

For the past seven years CableFile—the annual cable television reference directory—has charted the rapid growth of the cable television business. CableFile/83 represents a mature cable television industry, one that has slowed its explosive growth of the late '70s and that can be depicted only in voluminous detail.

The material supplied in these two volumes of CableFile/83 is gathered from system operators, system owners, programmers, and suppliers. There are no suppositions from random samplings or extrapolations based in industry trends. CableFile's superiority rests in its collection of vast amounts of raw data and organization into a legible and comprehensive format.

This year's directory provides five new sections which delve into the areas of programming, finances, and brokerage. More specifically, CableFile/83 includes a Satellite Service Growth Chart which summarizes the maturation of basic/pay programming services. We have supplied a directory of program producers and a list of their current cable projects. As an added feature fifty of the top companies in cable are profiled with accompanying financial charts. We have updated and expanded the brokers and financial analysts section to provide you with convenient access to their services.

CableFile/83 offers an array of information bound into one reference source. In the years to follow, CableFile will continue to monitor cable's growth, and present you with an up to the minute reference publication.

Basic & Pay Cable Subscriber Growth 1970-1990

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION—1980 CABLE TELEVISION INDUSTRY DATA

Reliable figures on the cable television industry are hard to come by, especially financial data. The Federal Communications Commission recently released its computations for the cable industry in 1980 and, although dated, it does shed some light on the grow[illegible] industry in the last six years. The tables and charts below cover the 1980 fiscal year and the growth of the cable industry from 1975 to 1980.

CABLE TELEVISION INDUSTRY FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

CABLE TELEVISION INDUSTRY DEBT FIGURES

A cable system's ability to fulfill its franchise promises usually depends on the availability of and success in obtaining financing. In recent years the cable industry's debt has increased significantly as the last rounds of the franchise wars have been fought and massive city systems have begun construction. The tables and charts below illustrate the finance industry's gradual acceptance of cable as a financially legitimate industry and indicate the lending climate the cable industry can expect in the future.

FOREWORD

Volume II of CableFile/83 is the result of an extensive research project begun in the spring of '82 and completed in mid-September of that year. The volume presents a detailed and comprehensive picture of the nation's multiple cable system operators and of individual cable systems and operators.

CableFile/83 profiles 5642 cable systems serving 12,411 communities. Two-hundred-sixty-seven MSO's are ranked by subscriber count. Each MSO is highlighted in the MSO section.

Information for Volume II was collected by an initial mailing to all cable systems and MSOs listed in the '82 edition. Additional cable systems were discovered by calling state association lists, Copyright Office filings, new franchise grants, and by contacting town halls, Chambers of Commerce and directory assistance.

Every cable system and MSO was contacted by mail and/or telephone to ensure current and accurate information.

During 1983, CableFile's research staff will be conducting quarterly updates of the system profile. In addition, the staff will be developing more specialized information packages as the cable industry's need for this information expands.

MULTIPLE SYSTEM OPERATORS

The Cable System Owners section provides a comprehensive look at MSOs operating in the United States. For the 1983 edition we have modified the section to list the operating systems by system name, headend, and communities served. When available, we have listed non-operating systems followed in parentheses by the potential number of homes to be passed.

Of particular use in the MSO section is the statistical information appearing at the end of each MSO listing. Where the information has been available, we have listed the number of operating systems, total basic subscribers, total pay subscribers (pay units), total homes passed (currently), and total homes in unbuilt franchise areas (potential homes to be passed).

Note: Headend communities appear in italics. Any communities located in a state separate from the MSO main office will be accompanied with the appropriate state code.

SYSTEM PROFILE LEGEND

An extensive research effort this year offers a substantially expanded and updated System Profile for CableFile/83. Each of the nation's systems are profiled; listed by state, and within each state alphabetically by headend community. Ninety-two percent of systems contacted have supplied us with information as of June 1982 or later.

In addition to improving upon last year's system profile, this year's staff explored the areas of rebuild, advertising, public access, local origination, and equipment suppliers. This information may be easily accessed in a variety of formats by purchasing reports from our frequently updated CableFile Data Base.

For your convenience CableFile/83 offers, as an introduction to each state, a summarization of the total number of systems, number of communities served, homes passed, pay units and basic subscribers.

We also provide a complete listing of all pertinent information about each cable system, including the local manager, number of subscribers, plant miles, basic, pay and regional cable rates and the name of the basic, pay and regional program suppliers. In cases where we were unable to obtain all the information, we have listed the information that was available.

We have incorporated into the system profile the HBO, Showtime, Cinemax and The Movie Channel logos which appear above the listings of systems that offer these pay services to their respective subscribers. (These are paid advertisements.)

Below is a legend explaining all the possible entries for any given cable television system.
